In Judaism, it is customary to place rocks instead of flowers at a gravesite. While flowers decorate the gravesite, they too pass on.

Rocks mark our presence. They make the statement that someone has stopped, reflected for a moment and honored the life that was lost.

Allison Krause, Sandra Scheuer, and Jeffrey Miller were Jewish.

In their honor, the Hillel Jewish Student Center has made these rocks available for those who wish to remember Allison, Sandy, Jeff and William Schroeder according to Jewish tradition.
